Vedette Directory, UTAH.
Area, 100,000 square miles—Population, 170,000.
The Capital, Great Salt Lake City, (Population, 17,000) is situated on the great highway westward, in the grand center of the golden circle connecting Colorado, Nevada, Idaho, New Mexico and Arizona. The City is one of the most beautiful in the Union, and the largest between St. Louis and Sacramento. Its scenery of mountains is majestic, and its view of islands and Lake is perfectly picturesque.

Both on the Continent and in this country, the manufacture of "artificial ivory" is conducted on a scale of some magnitude. The process by which the most successful imitation of natural ivory is obtained, appears to consist in the salting either of rubber or of percha in chloroform, passing chlorine through the solution until it has acquired a light yellow tint, next washing well with alcohol, then adding in fine powder either sulphate of barytes, sulphate of lime, sulphate of lead, alumina, or chalk in quantity proportioned to the desired density, and finally kneading well, and finally subjecting to heavy pressure. The result is a tough product capable of standing very heavy high polish, as is shown in this illustration.

John Milton, the poet, was born in London, in the year 1608. He was designed by his parents for holy orders, but at an early age conceived a deep prejudice against the doctrine and discipline of the church. His first efforts as a public writer were in the production of several pieces for the stage—the first of which appeared in 1634, when he was in the twenty-fourth year. Four years afterwards he set out on a tour of travels, visiting Paris and Nice, thence the principal cities of Italy, returning, by way of Paris, again to England. At this time England was in a state of commotion on account of the contest between the King and Parliament, and Milton appeared as a champion for the Puritans, and published some works in their defense. He thus obtained considerable notoriety as an advocate of the Reformation.

In the year 1643, in his thirty-fifth year, he married one Mary Powell of Forest Hill, Oxfordshire. After living with him scarcely one month she returned to her parents, and utterly refused to leave them again. He was so angry at this that he determined not to recognize her any longer as his wife, and, to justify his course before the world, he wrote and published a pamphlet, under the title of "The Doctrine and Discipline of Divorce," in which he argued—contrary to the teaching of the Saviour and the recognized doctrine of the Church—that a man might lawfully put away his wife for other causes than that of adultery. He afterwards published a second and enlarged edition, and dedicated it to the Parliament of England and the Assembly of Divines, that as they were consulting about the general reformation of the kingdom, they might also take this particular case of domestic liberty into consideration! As might have been expected, his book met with little favor at the hands of those stern, old puritans, who considered that it should be burned, and the author arrested. He then endeavored to prove his doctrine of divorce from the scriptures. This work met with little favor as the other. Indeed, it was considered an innovation upon the plain taught doctrine of the Bible, that his former friends—the Presbyterians—sought him and he became as bitterly opposed to them, as he had before been warmly in their favor. Failing to convince Parliament of the orthodoxy of his doctrine of Divorce, he conceived the idea of marrying again, and hence his advocacy of Polygamy. He doubtless convinced himself of the correctness of his new doctrine, in as much as he actually paid his addresses to "a young lady of great beauty and wit"—Miss Davies—with a view of making her his second wife. However, his addresses were not favorably received, and soon afterwards—through the intervention of friends the quarrel with his wife was settled, and they came together again. This was the end of Milton's attempt at Polygamy; for, although he married in the course of his life three different wives, he very prudently waited until one was dead before taking another.

The writer in the Telegraph is unfortunately in his assertion that Milton was no less famous as a poet than as a Theologian. The fact of the matter is that Milton obtained not quite as much fame or notoriety on account of his views and writings on theology. Indeed, he seems to have had no fixed religious principles at all. He commenced life as a "disciple" from the Church of England. He was in favor of the Presbyterians until, by his advocacy of convenient divorce and polygamy, he offended them. In his middle age he favored the Anabaptists, and in the latter part of his life he was not a member of any church, attended no place of public worship, and used no religious ceremony in his family. As a poet, the writer of Paradise Lost is justly celebrated; but as a theologian, the compiler of the Doctrine and Discipline of Divorce and the writer of a pitiful attempt to prove the divinity of polygamy—is characteristically forgotten. So much for "this illustrious champion of polygamy." If, as the writer in the Telegraph asserts, he lost his sight while laboring in defense of the "peculiar institution," we can but regard his publication as just. We are, however, bound to believe that he was afflicted with a disease then—physical blindness when he attempted to justify and defend a system of marriage at once obnoxious to every refined moral sense, and contrary to the precepts and practice of the Apostles of Christianity. It is true that some of the honored men of the present world were guilty of practices which our Saviour condemns. The Old Testament records a few instances of men taking to themselves more than one wife; but we have yet to learn that the practice was enjoined upon them as a religious duty. Surely, Abraham,

Hagar, the maid, was simply an Ethiopian slave whom Abraham had bought. Surely, the argument is as much in favor of Slavery as Polygamy. It seems strange, to say the least, that men professing intelligence, should cleave to a doctrine which ignores the dispensation of Christ, and looks for its antecedents to the time when civilization was in its infancy. Ignoring the virtues and imitating its principles, and the vices of those days. Let those who are thus fond of looking for precedents to the practices of the world remember, that in the beginning God created one man, Adam; and gave him for a companion one woman, Eve. Surely it, as Mormonism claims, Polygamy is equal to a strict fulfillment of the injunction, "Go and multiply, and replenish the earth." God would have given Adam "as many Eves as he could support!" But the last and meanest subterfuge to which error resorts is the endeavor to find its parallel in the authority in the records of holy writ. When advancing civilization interferes with a monstrous wrong, the cry of "persecution" is raised, and its votaries would steal even the livings of Heaven with which to clothe their sin. It was thus with the institution of Slavery; it is thus with its "twin sister," Polygamy; and as the fate of one has been, so surely will that of the other be. Even "this people" will yet learn that four thousand years of the world's progress had not been in vain when Jesus taught, that "Old things have passed away, and behold, all things have become new."

From Our Montana Correspondent.

HELENA, January 20, '66.

Dear Telegraph—The winter of '66 bids fair to surpass in rigor all its predecessors. Many cattle have already perished, and much anxiety is felt as to a proper supply of these useful and convenient animals is the approaching spring. Already $175 to $200 is offered for work cattle, in good condition, and a further raise seems inevitable. But beasts are by no means the greatest sufferers. I have noticed no less than seven miners, or prospectors rather, who have frozen their feet within the last ten days. From reports that reach us, nearly every mining camp is full of these unfortunate fellows.

THE GREAT STAMPEDE

from all quarters to the Missouri and San River is all the excitement. It looks at the present writing, very much like a large-sized "steamboat." Many have already returned who declare the whole story a fabrication. Others assert that they found only "fire dollar" diggings, and still another report runs to the effect that the multitude did not find the discovery at all! In a few days at the latest, from the number of those out, the evidence in favor of or against the "San River excitement" will be overwhelming; although we await, without further comment, reliable intelligence. It is a source of regret that so many have imprudently exposed themselves, out night and day in the open air, to all the rigors of our northern winter. Hundreds (we are told by a returned prospector) have feet, fingers or other limbs frozen; nor can we wonder, when the thermometer indicates a temperature from thirty to thirty-five below zero.

ARISTOCRACY VS. DEMOCRACY.

Mining camps, as well as older cities, have their different "classes" of society. We had an illustration of this spirit on the occasion of a New Year's ball, that may lead to further discussion. Circulars of invitation were issued, stating that no visitors would be expected who had not received the above named invitation. A miner received an invitation desiring him, to bring his lady, which he complied with. It appears that (as he says) from some unknown cause he was requested to withdraw and take his lady with him. This has led to a newspaper correspondence, and has been the occasion of the usual scandal, while both parties have friends who endorse the character and conduct of each.

Several large nuggets were taken from Montana Gulch (a tributary of Confederate) a few weeks since, which are now on exhibition at Allen & Millard's Bank, in this city. One piece weighs over $1,100; in all some $2,500 worth of these lumps were found imbedded in a small crevice within a few inches space. "Montana Gravel" and "McClellan Gulch," we think, will compare favorably with any discoveries of the free gold made on the American continent.

THE MORMON MAN'S PROPOSALS

are flattering indeed. What with the rich soil of the "Prickly-Pear," the "Gallatin" and "Missouri," with the high price of vegetables and grain, and the expected emigration, the farmer may well feel sanguine of a full remuneration for his toil the coming season.

INDEX.

An Englishman paying an Irish shabbiness with rudeness, the dirty urchin said: "My honey, all the polish you have is upon your boots, and I gave you that!"

THE YANKEE

(SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.)
WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.
The Committee on Ways and Means have not yet voted on McCulloch's loan bill, which was laid aside temporarily for modification. There is a prospect that a new bill will be prepared.

The Committee on Finance, Internal Revenue made a lengthy report accompanying the draft bills modifying the law. The report meets only a qualified approval, as contemplating to perpetuate taxation and national debt. The President communicated to the Senate a message from General Sherman, dated Jan. 28, 1864, in which he reported the progress of the military operations in the West. Sherman's report opens with a letter from General Sherman, dated May 4th, 1861, calling attention to the southern project for seizing Mexico and establishing a new empire. He then proceeds to state the progress of the military operations in the West, and the success of the expedition against the rebels. He also mentions the success of the expedition against the rebels in the West, and the success of the expedition against the rebels in the West.

Mr. Wilson introduced a bill establishing national militia action; a regiment of infantry for each Congressional district, with provisions similar to the late draft law. The debate on bill conferring civil rights was resumed. Cowan called attention that it would naturalize Chinese children in California. Trumbull said Chinese children born here were citizens as much as German children. Considerable discussion ensued between Cowan and other Senators, when Howard, of Michigan, took the floor for a long speech, supporting the bill. Mr. Fessenden introduced a resolution which has been adopted, authorizing the payment of $10,000 to defray the expenses of Joint Committee on Reconstruction.

HOUSE.

Washington, Jan. 30.
The House recommitted the Constitutional amendment to a joint Committee, without instructions.

A resolution admitting Messrs Kyle, Byers and Johnson, of Arkansas, to the privilege of the floor, was rejected, yeas 64 and nays 94.

Sixty-nine Members of the House have made preparations for delivering of speeches on reconstruction. Their names have all been entered for that purpose, and they will speak in rotation.

Mr. Raymond spoke over two hours, taking the exact ground of the President against all secessionists, attacking the Reconstruction Committee, and styling it a committee to reconstruct the Government of the U. S., and calling upon the House to take the matter into consideration from such a domination. At the close of Julian's speech, who followed Raymond, M. Griswold of New York moved to recommend the whole subject to the Joint Committee on Reconstruction, without instructions and with permission to report at any time. A vote upon this will be taken to-morrow, and there seems no doubt it will succeed.

GENERAL NEWS.

Philadelphia, Jan. 30.
Gov. Curtin's Message was communicated to the Pennsylvania Legislature to-day, and gives a gratifying financial exhibit, and approves the President's policy.

New York, Jan. 30.
Jamaica advises the arrival of Gov. Storck, who took the oath of office, on the 29th. The counsel for Mrs. Gordon also arrived from London. Court would open on the 23d.

The Tribune's Washington correspondent says, rumors with more than ordinary probability, for several months, are now being spread, that J. F. Davis will be speedily brought to trial before a Military Commission. Senator Dixon, of Connecticut, is the person with whom the President had a conversation as published. This conversation is attracting much sensation.

The Consul at Leghorn, under date of Dec. 31st, informs the State Department that quarantine regulations against vessels coming from Marseilles, Naples and other ports, where cholera has prevailed, has been removed. The cholera has abated somewhat at Gussuloupe, though retaining full force in the interior. Total deaths, 11,200.

The Herald's Rio Janeiro letter gives the full letter of President Lopez, of Paraguay, to Gen. Miter, the Argentine President heretofore, alluded to in reports. Instead of containing peace propositions, it avows the most warlike determination, and to retaliate for alleged barbarities.

New Orleans, Jan. 27.
Gen. Sheridan today refused to allow emigrants to leave for Mexico, acting under instructions from Washington.

St. Louis, Jan. 30.
The Pacific Railroad bridge over the Kansas River has been completed. Passengers now go through to Topeka, Kansas, without change of cars.

Chicago, Jan. 30.
The Washington correspondent of the Chicago Tribune says, it has been difficult to convince the radical members of Congress that the reported conversation telegraphed yesterday, had the President's sanction. But such is the fact, he having revised the copy, and directed it sent to press. In his view the whole statement is herewith telegraphed.

The President said he doubted the propriety at this time of making any further amendments to the constitution. One great amendment had already been made, by which slavery had been forever abolished within the light of the United States, and the national guarantee thus given that institution should never again exist in the land. Proposals to amend the constitution, were becoming numerous as resolutions at town meetings, called to consider the most ordinary questions of local affairs. "All these, in his opinion, had a tendency to diminish the dignity and prestige attached to the constitution of the country, and to lessen the respect and veneration of the people in their great character of freedom. If, however, amend-
